I get into my car, turn the radio on Drive by your house, your window, your bed Well, it's been two years gone, since we've been over and done
Ah, but your voice is still ringing in my years

Who divided up the days into hours, the hours into minutes
How could they be really that smart Who divided up the minutes into seconds, they must have had a broken
Must have had a broken heart.

I saw you way up town, another girl by your side
I knew by your smile she was more than just a friend I'm gonna bury my heart in a coffin so deep, Lord Know when I'll never feel your arms again

Who divided up the days into hours, the hours into
minutes
How could they be really that smart
Who divided up the minutes into seconds, they must have had a broken
Must have had a broken heart.

'Cause when love is over, you're gonna learn about time

You're gonna plot and scheme, you're gonna weep and moan
You're gonna wonder why, why, why

It's 3:00 a.m. says the clock on the wall Here in the dark of the night the world stands still I'm reaching for the phone, that old number to paw Oh, but I know I can't stand to feel that chill

Who divided up the days into hours, the hours into
minutes
How could they be really that smart
Who divided up the minutes into seconds, they must
have had a broken

Must have had a broken heart.

Who divided up the days into hours, the hours into

How could they really be that smart

Who divided up the minutes into seconds, they must have had a broken

Must have had a broken heart, oh, they must have had a broken heart

They must have, must have, must have had a broken heart.
