City of stars that hide through the night Pity the dogs left out in the moonlight Talk about God and the weather is fine, just fine
The taste of ambition is bitter and sweet It sings in a dream and then sleeps on a street It's there in the eyes of the people you meet all the time, all the time

This is the place where all of the fallen and the
forsaken never move on You've lost the race if you're feet fail you in the city of angels
Wings don't grow on palm trees or lost souls

The city of songs that burn holes in your heart Pity the ones that don't know where to start out They walk without hope as the ocean rolls by Lies on the tongues and the mouths of the men Who deny us the chance to live as we planned Freedom feels good if only freedom were mine, all mine

This is the place where all of the fallen and the
forsaken never move on You've lost the race if you're feet fail you in the city of
angels
Wings don't grow on palm trees or lost souls

There's no in between here
You either whisper or scream here
And if you say you feel at home you know You're missing somewhere else

This is the place where all of the fallen and the
forsaken never move on You've lost the race if you're feet fail you in the city of
angels
Wings don't grow
This is the place where all of the fallen and the
forsaken never move on You've lost the race if you're feet fail you in the city of
angels

Wings don't grow on palm trees or lost souls
On palm trees or lost souls
On palm trees or lost souls
