Every year when this day rolls around
I think of the night we both tore up the town
And I wonder if you're laughing with your eyes glowing
And the pretty conversation where the wines flow
They're running your play just like always

Everyday at least one time
I picture your face in the back of my mind
Smiling at the ocean with your eyes shinin'
It has a red river and a [Incomprehensible]
For a thousand days just like always

Maybe someday our real love, we'll forget
If we start to live again the life without regret
Funny, isn't it? But the men ain't laughin' yet
Does love really last forever?
Ocean misses sunset every time

I pass your street, I look both ways
So incomplete and I think that I might see
Lord knows how I will, I wish that you will call me
Then I know you won't but I love you anyway
Just like always, just like always, just like always
