CLAUSURA PANDITE IANUAE claustra pandite ianuae. Open the bars of the door virgo adest. videunt ut faces there is a young woman splendidas quatiunt comas? do you see how the marriage torches shake their fiery locks? tardet ingenuus pudor. A natural sense of shame may delay the bride flet quod ire necesse est. she may weep, because she must go flere desine. non tibi Aurunculeia Stop crying, -, in your case periculum est, there is no danger that ne qua femina pulcrior a prettier woman has seen clarum ab Oceano diem the rising light of day viderit venientem.

talis in vario solet Such a hyacinth-coloured flower divitis domini hortulo usually stands in the little garden stare flos hyacinthinus. of a wealthy lord sed moraris, abit dies. but you are dallying and the day is ending prodeas nova nupta. so, go forth as the young bride prodeas nova nupta, si Please go forth as the young bride iam videtur, et audias if seems proper at this time nostra verba. Vide -- faces and hear our words, see(?) aureas quatiunt comas: the wedding torches shake their golden locks

non tuus levis in mala Your husband is not fickle deditus vir adultera, not devoted to a bad mistress probra turpia persequens, he doesn't pursue indecent scandals a tuis teneris volet and he doesn't want to sleep apart secubare papillis, from your dainty little breasts lenta sed velut adsitas but just as a supple vine vitis implicat arbores, entwines with trees planted nearby implicabitur in tuum he will get entangled in your embrace complexum. sed abit dies: but the day is ending

o cubile, o cubile O marriage bed, o marriage bed quae tuo veniunt ero, which is to you like a large hamper quanta gaudia, quae vaga full of many pleasure gaudeat! sed abit dies: enjoy! but the day is ending
