What do you want me to say you know it's true
Can't seem to get through the day when I'm with you All the subliminal ways you have of draining the life from the room.

How do you want me to feel when your around i try to listen but you just bring me down all of the cynical words that you say go floating right over my head

Sunshine, quit your crying
Let some light into the room
Sometimes you need reminding
How the world reflects your moods

Dimly aware of the lives we choose to live We're only seen in the light we choose to give And at the end of the day in the light that we're leaving behind

Sunshine, quit your crying
Let some light into the room
Sometimes you need reminding

for all your doubts gravity is weighing us down pulling us in but it's keeping our feet on the ground

Sunshine, quit your crying
Let some light into the room
Sometimes you need reminding

today and tomorrow, how the world turns around in splendor and sorrow, all the meaning is found with every decision, like the wave to the pearl you're lending your vision to the shape of the world

What do you want me to say you know it's true
