I pulled into the grocery, to get a candybar.
I needed a little something sweet and there you are.
I gave you a dollar, you gave me some change. A little change... you gave me a little...

Change in my foot step, a change in my walk.
A change in the way I stammer my words as I talk.
A little change won't hurt me at all. A little change... you gave me a little...

Change in my hunger, a change in my thirst.
A change in the way I wet my lips with the dryness of
your curse,
A little change could be worse. A little change... you gave me, A little change.

Now, change for my coffee, and change for my gas.
Change with a perfumed taste in my mouth, I wonder how long it will last.
A little change will come to pass. A little change... you gave me, A little change.

I will see you again, on this old highway,
In this trip called life, oh, I will find my way.
A little change could be my wife.
A little change could change my life.
A little change sure would be nice. A little change... you gave me a little change.
