Elemental Ghost Town - Jonathan Randol

Can't you see these cobwebs, coming out my window.
Can't you see these broken gutters clogged with dreams All you're gonna see this time, is all you've seen before and I still don't think that you know what it mean.

Can't you see this empty elemental ghost town stop signs bent down by the wind never been so strong all we ever did was take another look and hid
down in the grass waiting for the loneliness to pass.

train-wreck station filled with broken turnstyles bunkers built to beat the flush once aces are running wild all the trains were filled with lsd ecstasy and pcpc was there for free but had to leave when he o.d'd and can't you see Can't you see this empty elemental ghost town
stop signs bent down by the wind
another look and hid
waiting for the memories to pass.

I got mixed reviews on what you've been refusing choose the blue pill not to lose yourself in this again all that you can see will never mean that much to me and i dont think that i'll need to leave these streets until i see a sign that reads this empty elemental ghost town stop signs sunk down in the sand never been so wrong all we ever did was done and covered up again and now its gone wonder if we'll ever move beyond
