I find it hard to believe we grew up this fast unable to make it last never forced to release but choosing the past rather slit my wrist and take a bath cant even look at myself i feel like a ghost we hurt the ones we love the most amidst the final farewell she offered a toast i knew at once my glass was dosed

some would say that we jumped too soon and i don't want to go on knowing all the nights that i spent with you
this arrow carved you out this arrow look at you now i count the ways out

nothing will mend
this love is broken so i live without i try to extend my hands to wash your dissidence even when shes close to me i feel like its wrong giving up another day not how its supposed to be numb to respond i know theres something in the way

Chorus

got an arrow i'll shoot it
see you when you open your eyes i say hello

what we've become brought into another world this arrow stuck in me pulled me away
caught under the ricochet
