The TV's blaring, the radio is turned up loud Maybe then I'll sleep well, maybe then I'll drown you out
Don't want to think much I don't want to reminisce
'Cause love songs and poems have all lead, they've all led me to this

It's dangerous to be sleeping alone
And it's way, way, way
It's way to cold to be at home

I've locked up tightly I must say I've had my doubts
'Cause they will kick and they will scream
But there's no way they're ever getting out
They breathed fresh air once, a long time, a long time ago
And now stuck up inside my head, how they ever gonna grow?

It's dangerous, to be sleeping alone
And it's way, way, way
It's way to cold to be at home
And I am what I am, yes I am what I am
It ain't that bad

What I'm trying to say here is not worth
It's not worth your time
I'm just a lonely, a lonely love sick boy with my rhyme

It's dangerous to be sleeping alone
And it's way, way, way
It's way to cold to be at home
And I am what I am, yes I am what I am
It ain't that bad

And even the toughest white boy
Yes, even the baddest white boy
He still gets sad
