"Sanctuary"

A row of love broke it seems spilling all our precious dreams
among the jagged fragments and all the space between we stood in awe of this sacred scene.
Wondered what it all could mean.
We watched vague confusion
at the working of the great unseen.
To the timeless sound of shattering
we saw the fragments of our universe scattering.
Sounded like an angel singing somewhere.
Sounded like an angel singing,
"Sanctuary, sanctuary.
Let me be your sanctuary.
Sanctuary, sanctuary.
Let me be your sanctuary.
When you cannot find the light
of your own shining star
I will (let me) help you to remember
who you truly are.
who you truly are.
Let me be your sancturay."
I broke down, lost myself.
In the end I can?t blame anybody else, no.
Visions called but I send them all away.
Looked in the water, what did I see?
Glimmers of my own mystery.
I tried to introduce myself
but I could not find the words to say.
As I gazed into his countenance
so amazed the wreckage so immense.
Sounded like an angel singing somewhere.
Sounded like an angel singing,
"Sanctuary, sanctuary.
Let me be your sanctuary.
Sanctuary, sanctuary.
Let me be your sanctuary.
When you cannot find the light
of your own shining star
I will (let me) help you to remember
who you truly are.

who you truly are.
Let me be your sancturay."
