Lock it out with your four pane window
Lock it out, still the wind's gonna blow,
Running freely on the air
From the hill we can see it coming,
Out the door, hit the ground running
But I ain't running out yet

Go ahead and cry to your mother,
I swear you'll end up just like her
And I'll be like the man that left her alone
These walls look too high for climbing
Look around, the water is rising
But I ain't running out yet

Baby I ain't your Friday night lover
I ain't your Saturday friend
I take the place of all those others
Baby, I'm your everyday man
I ain't running out yet

Lock it in with your high-rise ceilings
Lock me down, can't stop the feeling
Flowing freely like the water
From the valley we see it's flooding,
Out the door, hit the ground running
But I ain't running out yet

Baby I ain't your Friday night lover
I ain't your Saturday friend
I take the place of all those others
Baby, I'm your everyday man

I swear I remember a time
When "goodbye" wouldn't leave my eyes dry
But the river that flowed between here and first site
Is enough to remind me to stand by your side
I ain't running out yet
I ain't running out yet

I ain't your Friday night lover
I ain't your Saturday friend

I take the place of all those others
Baby, I'm your everyday man
And I ain't running out yet
