I showed up at her door,
No gifts or explanations,
For the way that I had been acting,
Father time just kept on passing.

I tried to kiss her lips,
She said let's put an end to this.
A simple overreaction,
That sent my head into a backspin.

I don't know where to run...
(I'll be lone...)

To run,
She was a teenage girl,
I made sure to promise her the world-
Spent money fast as lightning,
Anything just to keep her smiling.

My voice was all she heard,
Sentences filled with empty words.
Oh, I thought I was so clever,
Never knew that our line would sever.

I don't know where to run...
Ohh-Ohh-Ohhhh-Ohh-Ohh
I don't know where to run...
Oh, Oh...
And I have nowhere to run.
(Is this end of the...?)

I wake up on the floor,
My head replays that closing door,
My heart won't stop rewinding,
Inside clocks all out of timing.

She starts to disappear,
They'll be no turning back from here,
When all is said and done-
And I begin to run...
