"The Last Love Song"

I know it's over cause I don't keep you satisfied anymore
But before you move along let me sing you the last love song
Tomorrow when I'll wake what will take the place Of smiles on your face and black hair against white lace
And I wonder if I'll be thinking of our early morning love
All the sweet things that you'd say that's brighten up my darkest day
And tomorrow night what do use the chest to take the place of your breast Breast against my chest oh how I'll miss your tenderness but there's no use to cryin' Cause love's a grown up game a little pleasure then a lot of pain
First we call each other bad names then what we have was never quite the same I wish I could find eyes that won't cry lips that won't lie and love that won't die Hmm hmm hmm hm and a love that won't die
