Don't you hope,
We can start again
Endings are old,
But they help you see
Can't quite believe,
All of this and what it means
You've become so bitter

You think you're better alone,
For the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul,
If you just learn to breath again
You never had the nerve to begin with
You think you're better alone

Been here before,
seeking safety and something to blame
You feel so hollow,
You can swear that you've grown
Worth anything,
As big as your dream

You've become so bitter

You think you're better alone,
For the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul,
If you just learn to breath again
You never had the nerve to begin with
You think you're better alone

Never had the nerve to begin with
Got to come to your senses

You think you're better alone,
For the sake of your sanity
It won't hurt a soul,
If you just learn to breath again
You think you're better alone
It won't hurt a soul
