Misery

Misery sings at the Hilton
Steps into the purple spotlight
Leans into the microphone

Misery

Sways his hips and smooths his hair back
Winks at you and gets you thinking
He is handsome from a certain angle

Happiness

Slips in and takes a seat
At a table in the corner
And watches you with real concern, yeah

Happiness

Walks up and taps your shoulder and says
"Call me when you wanna come back home"

Misery

Woos you when his show is over
Buys you drinks and keeps you laughing
While he's looking down your shirt

Misery

Says, "I believe in destiny"
Says, "Destiny says brought us together"
Says, "Who's that asshole in the corner?"

Happiness

Doodles on a cocktail napkin
And waits for you to figure out
That you should really lose this loser

And Happiness

Smiles a sympathetic smile that says
"Call me when you wanna come back home"

Misery

Says, "Oh I know life can be too hard to bear sometimes,
Yeah"

Misery

Says, "So why don't we go get a room upstairs
'Cos I never disappoint"

Misery

Says, "Hey baby where you going?"

I thought we had an understanding
You shouldn't really lead me on like that"
Misery
Says, "Well lady I know your kind
You'll settle down with someone boring
And then you will come looking for me"
And Happiness
Says, says, "Misery leave her alone
'Cos I know you get your share of girls
But I prefer a full-grown woman"
Happiness
Says, "Honey you know the number
Call me when you wanna come back home
Call me when you wanna come back home to me
Call me when you wanna come back home"
