In the morning, in the morning I'm alright
The sun is so bright, the sky is so clear
But by the evening, by the evening I can tell
Nothing will help if you won't be here
I'm trying to live my life from day to day
But the sun goes down and steals the hope away
I die a little every night, every night you go again
And every night I know
You won't come though the door
I cry in the middle of the night
The night that never seems to end
Then just when it seems I can't, I die a little more
When you held me
When you held me I could dream
I could believe that was enough
But in the darkness, in the darkness I can see
Whatever will be will never be love
I'm gonna try to keep the flame alive
But when the cold wind blows
I doubt that we'll survive
I die a little every night, every night you go again
And every night I know
You won't come though the door
I cry in the middle of the night
The night that never seems to end
Then just when it seems I can't, I die a little more
I wish that I could find a reason to let you go
But I don't know where to start
Every road leads back to your heart
I die a little every night, every night you go again
And every night I know
You won't come though the door
I cry in the middle of the night
The night that never seems to end
Then just when it seems I can't, I die a little more
I die a little every night, every night you go again
And every night I know
You won't come though the door
I cry in the middle of the night
The night that never seems to end
Then just when it seems I can't, I die a little more
