when i look at the sky, it all gets so heavy and the reason why is an endless journey and sometimes it just seems so far away then i look in your eye and i find a place it seems as vast as outer space and i find myself with one thing left to say that you are my only true star shine with all your might guide me through this lonely night and i want whatever you want and after all we've said and we've done maybe, i think, it's time you came with me sometimes when i wake up i feel so heavy and getting off the floor can be such a journey until i remember why we ran away then i pretend to see your face and i strike up interesting conversation to steal your heart when you find me in your doorway you are my only true star

shine with all your might

... then i remember why we ran away
... then i remember why we had to run because you are my only true star

shine with all your might

and after all we've said and we've done
