Listen to me and I will sing you an angry song Remember my words, you won't have to hear them for very long
It's enough to be vacant, enough just to stare
You don't have to struggle, you don't have to care Just pretend that you do – that's enough to get you by

You know that it's fine, you know that everything's A-OK
Another blue sky, another impossibly perfect day
There's no time for truth, no time for lies
Either way it comes out you'll know otherwise
And I don't anymore – I guess I never did

No anger's not my master, just something I can use
And I won't be complacent, 'cause I want you to choose
And I don't think that it's wasted, I think it's worth the pain
And I'll see you tomorrow to explain again

Don't ask me why, don't ask me how I have come to this Just open your eyes and try to see the world as it is
And all that I want is this pounding to cease
Yeah lay down your weapons, I come in Peace
But I won't be silent – I won't be turned away

No anger's not my master, just something I can use
And I won't be complacent, 'cause I want you to choose
And I don't think that it's wasted, I think it's worth the
pain
And I'll see you tomorrow to explain again (and again)

You'll listen to me as I will sing you an angry song
You'll forget all my words, you won't have to hear them for very long
It's enough to be vacant, enough just to stare
But one day you'll struggle, one day you'll care
And then when you do – it's enough to get you by...
