Once they were lovers, but now they are not friends
She's found another, he says it's the end
To think they once tore down a wall of a door
Now they don't speak anymore

So he walks the streets, the few nights he can stand
Drinking her memory away when he can
Friends once would reach out to them from the shore
Now they don't try anymore
How does it all come to happen
That's not what love is for and if I thought it was
I would leave you in the morning
I'll sooner sleep on the floor

Oh, when will we learn really what loving is
Not what you get in return, but what you give
To think they once tore down a wall of a door
Now they don't speak anymore
