Well, I miss the sounds of Tennessee
And the smell of heavy rain
The roses in the garden
Laugh before the pain
But I hear his voice close in my ear
I see her smile and wave
I blink and while my eyes are closed
They both have gone away

Blue bare room, the wood and nails There's nothing left to take But love and years are not for sale In our old house on the lake

Well, I'm goin' down to New Orleans 'Cause we both are sinkin' fast And I'll stare into the Bourbon moon We'll see how long we last

But I hear his voice I follow down the velvet undertow Back to the place where I was born Back to my southern home

Blue bare room, the wood and nails There's nothing left to take But love and years are not for sale In our old house on the lake In our old house on the lake In our old house
