[written by Will Oldham, published by royal stable music (ascap)]

it's us i liken to a covey a polar bear has breached a pup
the palace walls are strewn with tapestries
and the window panes are splintered and shattered
with a crumbled dog
on every landing
and every stranger cowers
the dress is torn,
the tone demanding
the canine's latent strength and would her loins

would yield a yelp
a beating purr to steal the time with
here's where we walk,
hand in hand
o how i despise it
o how i enjoy the light of the first morning forever wisdom, wealth tag
on like afterbirth
i will love you forever

and if i don't
and if i do the difference exists in a fiction
the day has cooled,
the time will too
and we will call upon the light
