I throw myself into the rain as we run down these old train tracks again the moon is naked in the sky so maybe you and i could fly or pretend

as the stars fall from grace and light your glowing face i'm teaching myself to dream i'm holding my breath to scream i'm teaching myself to believe in things i don't understand i don't even know if they're true that's what dreamers do i can't say what day it is or year but thou shalt have no fear for i know your name you can't believe what i did and maybe i'm just a kid but then we're both the same i watch the hours through the glass and know that time will finally pass i'm teaching myself to dream i'm learning what love can be

believe in the things i don't understand
i don't even know if they're true

stapled eyes can't open until waking and all your lies will be your undertaking i let my mind dance and flow we'll make magic and i'll know as the lilacs slowly grow all my dreams are true

i don't even know if they're true
