Love used to be
A safe place
A refuge
Protecting the weakness
We kept in our hearts

But what bound us was just
But it'd finally break us
A stronghold collapsed
Like a frail house of cards

Now love has become
A faintness of memories
In life
That is no longer mine
Where refuge has turned Into desolate wasteland
And storm clouds appear
To darken our skies

In a world made of ice
And I'm freezing
Freezing to death
In this landscape
Of silence and ignorance
Selfishness, hate and regret
I am freezing to death

Love used to be
Our asylum, our haven
Where noone could enter
Except you and me
Surrounded by walls
That would not only guard us
But lock us inside
Eventually

But love has become
A forgotten accessory
Lost in the back of our minds

Where cold winds are blown

And I'm chilled to the bone
All tears changed to crystals
Embedded in lies

In this world made of ice
And I'm freezing
Freezing to death
In this landscape
Of silence and ignorance
Selfishness, hate and regret
I am freezing to death

Losing my breath after ages
I am freezing to death
I am freezing to death

And sometimes it seems like we've never existed
A dream that I woke up from
But far too late

Tainted and tonished
And still in position
No matter what
We were both headed straight for the fall

Oh I'm freezing
Freezing to death
In this landscape of silence
And ignorance
I am freezing to death
I am freezing to death
