I can wash my plate, put my things away
Ain't no shame to be alone
But when I stop, I can hear time walk, come to find me at home
Without you in my home
I'll be watching the silence grow
I can take the train to town and back again
I can be busy every day
But when I let myself in, the emptiness wins

And I ask myself, "Am I crazy?"
Without you in my home
I'll be watching the silence grow
I don't fight silence, 'cause it don't fight back
It just makes me lonelier
So I will wait it out, 'cause if I don't crack
It might make me holier
Without you in my home
I'll be watching the silence grow
