walk off to the woods & the streets every night walk to people who walk too close into each other they're hanging so bright i am told, as a mother, you may remember her she loves you, she loves you she loves you so hard but one dirty person to have you cannot

the child, he is a sinner tell me teacher, to put on your light & then turn around in the name of the father, but never the ghost me, i need the money for those just as hard who hung his head for the ladies all pretend that he dead

if there ever was a religious figure in my age, it don't count to have buttercup eyes the silent machine is here to make sure you put on your light & then turn around you lie, you lie, you lie ... a lot
