"World Is Ours"

You can see the walls in her eyes
It's holding back the world outside
You can feel the weight of her life
And you know that she thinks it's cold outside
You can understand her view
Just close her eyes and forget what's true
But you can let her know that the wall must still be broken
And you can let her know that the truth must still be spoken
Stone girl
Feeling nothing
Stone girl
Accepting nothing
Running away from life's confusion
Stone girl
And the time has come for her now
To grab whatever life will allow
You can feel the hope in her vow
And escape is all her mind will allow
But you can let her see that the wall must still be broken
And you can let her see that her words must still be spoken
It doesn't matter what they think
Because in the end you're on your own
She could shatter what they think
And show the world that she has grown
Silence brings her pain
Words could stop this rain
She must speak before she leaves today
Words could break the wall
But she won't speak at all
She must shout before she leaves today
