Someone somewhere tonight
Is taking their first steps
Letting go of the hands that held them
And trusting themselves

While someone somewhere tonight
Is hearing their last rites
And hoping with all their might
That there's something else

Well, babe, lie down here beside me
Let's lie real still
And tell me you love me
And you always will

Someone somewhere tonight
Is tasting their first kiss
Whispering softly this wish
For the night to go on

While someone somewhere tonight
Is holding onto a bottle
Pouring one more and praying that God will Get them through till the dawn

Well, babe, lie down here beside me
Let's lie real still
And tell me you love me
And you always will

Someone somewhere tonight
Is stuck in a prison
They're breathing, they're just barley living
Behind walls of their own

Well, someone somewhere tonight
Just found their own wings
Found some beauty, found some truth, found some meaning
In spite of it all

Well, babe, lie down here beside me
Let's lie real still
And tell me you love me
And you always will
