When it hurts too much to pretend
And the words burn inside your head
You can't say what you really mean
It's not that easy

If we never let each other know
Let the light shine in from upon our souls
We can dream but we'll never see
What life could be

Someday I'll find you
And I'll catch you
When you look my way
Someday you won't be afraid
And find the words to say
They were always there anyway
And I will be waiting [and I will be waiting]
'Cause I will be waiting ['cause I will be waiting]

When the tears are slowly melting down
And your heart's stuck on a merry-go-round

Praying you could find a sign for when
This game will end

Someday I'll find you
And I'll catch you
When you look my way
Someday you won't be afraid
And find the words to say
They were always there anyway
And I will be waiting

When you lose your thoughts
From a single look
When you can't remember
The last breath that you took
And I will be waiting

And I will be waiting
And I will be waiting
And I will be waiting

Slowly melting down
When it hurts too much to pretend
And the words burn inside your head
I will be waiting
I will be waiting
