I don't know which way I should turn
I'm too afraid of getting burned
When all the wells have come up dry
It's hard to take another try

But I pick myself up of the floor
And tried my best just like I did before
Just say yes... just say yes

Everytime I take a chance
This hesitation pulls me back
From finding out who I should be
I want to know the real me

So I pick myself above the floor
And realized just who I was before

I can't listen to the voice inside that keeps on saying I should never try
Just say yes
Just say yes

I don't know which way I should go
I'm too afraid of letting go
With this doubt to overcome
It's hard to see all that I've done

But I pick myself above the floor
And tried my best just like I did before
I just set aside the fear within and walk on through the door that held me in
Just say yes
Just say yes
