Such a lovely day to carry on your shoulders
It turned from blue to grey and you seem so much older
But its worth all the money in the world to find a way back to normal
If there's such a place

The doctor called your name and things became so sober
I suppose the price we'll pay will be worth it when it's over
But it takes every effort to believe in the unseen when you see clearly That things are not okay

Well I know you are frightened, and I know you are angry
And I know you tired of the unknown
But I am beside you, and I will remind you
That you don't have to go it alone

Seems a tailor made sickness for your sins dear If you planned your life away we never would be standing here
But with an impending bitter end
You have learned the lesson how The sweet is in the now

Well I know you are frightened, and I know you are angry
And I know you tired of the unknown
But I am beside you, and I will remind you
That you don't have to go it alone
Alone, Alone, We are not alone, Alone, Alone, Never,
Not alone

There are no guarantees, no promise they can make us
Our faith's a fighting seed planted deep in desperate trust
I will take every moment I can get
And won't regret I share your name
To Love is worth the pain
