"On Down"

Your tears rain down your face
Them grey eyes open wide
And they don't leave a trace
Of struggle in your stride

I hear the echo of your voice
As it repeats in my mind
I came here with a choice
Broken answers are all I find

I'll walk you down no matter the length
I'll try as hard as I can
Now wide them blue tears from your face
And I'll try the best that I can

As the sunsets paint a moon
And the nighttime only brings lies
You strand yourself in your room
As your innocence slowly dies

It feels just like you've bled
Every tear that could possibly fall
Far away from your head
You remember everything and nothing at all

I'll walk you down no matter the length
And I'll try as hard as I can
Now wide them blue tears from your rosy cheeks
And I'll do the best that I can

With all these feelings tied together I feel nothing
With all these feelings tied together I feel nothing

When those last words fell
They made my heavy heart beat
But there's one thing I can't tell
And that's how it spelled "complete"

So she slips and thinks down to the floor
And what feels like sun just looks like rain anymore
She waits as it builds up inside her mind

All them love thoughts she just left behind
And when she looks to the sky, she can't tell
How all those thoughts like red rain they fell
Down on her
Down on her
