So many prophets speak the truth, I get confused
Everyone's proud of his own nothing, it's so cool Millions of idiots share the same story swearing it's the one
Caged inside the walls they built like inmates without plan

And what I see
Kills what I feel
Kills what I am
And how I live

Shielded by outfits like an army of unknowns Invoking gods, praise sex and wealth to improve the world

And what I see
Kills what I feel
Kills what I am
And how I live

Don't call me son, don't call me at all
This is a love I do not want
Can't let me down, next time around
You'll be the same you've ever been

Trusty offspring of a clumsy culprit
The unnamed authority that leads our choice
In my sleep I dreamt of better ways to spread Enlightenment to trust my brothers
Wide awake I see the leftovers of Copyrighted fantasies without a cause

Don't call me son, don't call me at all
This is a love I do not want
Can't let me down, next time around
You'll be the same you've ever been

Nothing
You gave me nothing
Don't blame society
You can't be a victim

Of yourself

Choices

Always the simplest

To please the strongest

Feeling the safest

Of this mob

Don't call me son, don't call me at all

This is a love I do not want

Remember you can't let me down

Next time around you'll be the same you've ever been
