Written by Hal Hollander

I see your frustration in everything you do

I understand because sometimes, I still feel the same way to

We have to deal with this frustration to feel free

I'll help you learn to deal with it, you can depend on me

When you look outside you see the sky is blue

If you want to make it red, you know there is nothin you can do

Some things in life don't change no matter how you try

If you can't learn to deal with it those things are going to eat

You up inside

CHORUS

I don't want to see you cry (I don't wanna see you cry)

I always tried to make things right (I'm gonna make it right)

When you can see, the world is not the way you think it should be

And everything will seem alright

I know you gave all you had to give until you learned

Some people will just take and take and give you back nothin in return

That doesn't mean that you should change the things you do

Just don't always expect so much and things are gonna turn around for you

Chorus

And everything will seem alright

Instrumental Break

Chorus

Repeat Verse 1

Chorus

When you can see the world is not the way you think it should be then everything will

Seem alright

When you can see the world is not the way you think it should be then everything will

Seem alright

When you can see the world is not the way you think it should be then everything will

Seem alright
