let the lights turn green and let the roads be clear and let nobody be in the way daylight traffic moves so slow going to finally let you go dogwoods bloom by the river

come hell or high water you'll be there where i ought to now i always want to be there when you work the whole thing through you ask me to decide like there's a choice that matters like writing letters everyday broke at last, you're eyes won't fail walking out on the wrong day going to love you anyway

you'kk be there where i ought to
when you come out the other side everything i thought we knew someone's old is our new hits me like a hurricane blue eyed mornings don't come cheap talk too much, too easily but there's always more to say
