by the great missouri pacific line there goes the last train out of town the sun beat down and there's nothing more to see i turn my shadow back around back into town where i'll defend you endlessly and if we're running out of oxygen running out of fuel to burn drifting's an easy flight you said you'd stay all night and now you're saying that the lights are growing dim in this town we're living in someday sun delirium i notice there something strange going down

what made so pretty what made you so fine what makes you did so deep in this fool heart of mine i should've known you'd sell our love down the line

up in this town we're living in
