Well, I believe in a land
A land where fairy tales await Where kisses hang on hooks like bait And swing slowly back and forth before the faces of two lonely souls

This land which I'm singing of Houses such hatred, grief and love
So many wild and crazy things, emotions you would never dream of Yet they're tearing through your burdened heart, your soaking eyes

CHORUS:

And I think it's time I realized the strange reality
That this life this land is here and now and this person's me
So I am not gonna waste this moment
Next time

Now when, the night has found it's end
You're sitting with that special friend
A pause it drifts between then and your departure

Don't walk away, that's unwanted space lingering in between you and the other Move in for the kill

And I think it's time I realized the strange reality
That this life this land is here and now and this person's me...

BRIDGE:

You will not forgive yourself
You will not move gracefully forward
You will dwell, oh will you ever?
It's hell, let me tell you
And I will not waste this moment
No, I will never waste this moment
I will not waste this moment
Next time
