Welcome to the days of wariness
Where I'm feeling an echo inside my chest,
I've a heart beating impatiently long,
Waiting for the other half of it's song
It's song

No, it's not enough
Don't touch my hand and call it love
If you can't hold it tight, tonight
If you're not strong enough

And times have told the ways things come to light
Realizing a lack in your will to fight
Despite words crying at inconsistencies,
As you fall uneasily to your knees, your knees

No, it's not enough
Don't touch my hand and call it love
If you can't hold it tight, tonight
If you're not strong enough

And I'm not blind to what you're doing here

Make me feel like I'm special,
But my dear, I have seen through a weakness in your eyes
You don't know it, but you're telling me lies,
Me lies

And you will soon awake to see
There is no heart in anything you say to me
We thought we'd found a harmony, a perfect match of melodies
No, But if you listen closely now, I've been singing all alone

No, it's not enough
Don't touch my hand and call it love
If you can't hold it tight, tonight
If you're not strong enough

No, it's not enough

Don't touch my hand and call it love
If you can't hold it tight, tonight
If you're not strong enough
