Flickering and reflecting off glass
The pale light before dawn... a flower

In a short while, you will bloom beautifully in my arms
So close your eyes

Now, hold out your prestigious arms
With a cry like a canary, cross the lake of the night

Flickering and reflecting off glass
The pale light before dawn... a flower

When the morning comes, it's farewell
So until the night ends, in an outpouring of nectar

Now, wet my dry lips
With a hum like a canary, cross the darkness of the night

Flickering and reflecting off glass
The pale light before dawn... a flower

On the ledge in the red room, throw out your arms
Your empty gaze, that's still lovely

Bloom, the eternal desire
Fleeting pain until dawn... a flower
