I can't count how long... but some time has passed
I wonder just how much I know about you?
Following along the map with my finger isn't doing too much
I notice your uneasy face, though you are hiding it

As though resisting the face paced day that will be tomorrow
Even though I run about, it's strange... my heart sketches you

When I looked up, radiance filled the sky, without fading
If only we could have been like the sun, shining all the time

I want to be held by your scent... for just a little longer
The air outside pulls at my collar, then I turned my back on it

My sighs, blurred white, tell me of the season While repeating it all, suddenly I thought... why am I here?

I want to be by your side forever, gazing at your smile
I want to live each changing moment in your eyes
In that one scene, forever colored in gentle hues
In order for us to be closed, I want time to stop forever

I want to be by your side forever, gazing at your smile
I want to live each changing moment in your eyes
If one day I can take you out to a brilliant season To where the flowers are, blooming in the sky like snow... to where the flowers are
