If I scream out your name, will you love me again?

You said you'd never change. You said you'd never go away and now that you have left, a whole new person will replace. It is the same body, but now I'm staring at your back and as you walk away, everything we knew starts to change. I hear you say you're sorry, so loud they're screaming out your name. Can't hear the sincerity, and you're the only one to blame. Only one to blame.

Do I have to be front row to be noticed? Do I have to scream your name louder than her?

I won't cry when you play like they do. I won't reach out my hand to touch your skin.

I know there was a time, when you would call me number one in front of all these girls. You tell me where did I go wrong? I used to um our songs, and I was there when you wrote them about me, and now you're screaming them to her. I hear you say you're sorry, so loud they're screaming out your name. Can't hear the sincerity, and you're the only one to blame. Only one to blame.

I let you take every part of me and now, you've left me standing alone in your crowd.

I won't wait in line for you to love me. I won't stand and sweat and bleed to hear you live.

She's screaming loud, but I'm trying too, but she's getting tired, but there's hundreds of her, you say it's all in my mind, but it's in yours too, and she'll be here long after I'm gone. After I'm gone.

I won't wait in line for you to love me. I won't stand and sweat and bleed to hear you live.

And now that you have changed I have to go away and all these screaming girls will make your memory of me fade.
