the planer's lost and all I need to line my bed with handkerchiefs to bay my fatigue to build a case of true love lost and lives erased to live guilt free in a foretold destiny

he found a hill where he stakes his claim and he'll build a house where he'll martyr his children the trees wheeze out the ocean rise he's gaining ground in his high-rise with all proceeds from rewritten history in fairytales he still believes he breathes and thrives and he's immunized but he's paralyzed and he's sure to die off soon running for the middle higher ground but lower while all his coasts are running off cold waters boil mother earth's rage his house and family have washed away where was his savior his promised road he followed every rule they ever sold he saw his world as a vapor life support we colonize and we multiply as we suck it dry yeah we're sure to die off live it down live it down livid live it down
