Without blindness
There is no sight
You'd see the further if you'd only close your eyes

In unconsciousness
I can find peace
Inside prison walls I can find release

There is a place that I've seen
Somewhere between waking and sleeping

Down at the water's edge
Somebody waits for me
Is it too late for me?
"It's never too late", he says

Without blindness
Without blindness
there is no sight
there is failure
I'd see further people gather if I
by the river
close my eyes
they were talking about the failure
There is a place that I've seen
Somewhere between waking and sleeping

Leaning up (?) overside
Trailing my fingertips
Watching the water slip
Into the quiet night

Viewed from the wrong end of the telescope
I see myself
So far below

Still and silent
Rest in peace
A thread unravels

Such merciful release

There is a place that I've seen
Somewhere between waking and sleeping

Now I can all but see Figures upon the shore
He's gathering enemies (?)
Where are you taking me?
