A continent and seven hours away
And still I recall a simpler day
The Sun never ever sets here
Burning my last lie.

For under the cover of Darkness
There's no longer a single lie
Down here there's no more room
For anything but well-bent truth

Bury me under the Sun
I'm drowning
Wipe away all that I see
Blind Me
Bury me under the sun
Bury Me under the sun

The widows watch and then blinded
And I've been away so long(away so long)
Perpetual Isolation
The knots on its rope have come undone

The Doors are closed
She's changed the locks
Judgment passed, set in stone
Put it up and burn to ash
Rebuild this broken home.

Drowning
Choking on bitter apprehension
Blind me
Dowsing with escalating tension
Bury me under the sun
Bury me under the sun

Were nothing forever cold silence
Only smoking words and dust
Echoes scream of the past earning you more distrust

Apologize to callous ears
A desert of dusty tears
A flock of crows on my blight
Taste the words I should have had.
The words I should have had
The words I have

A continent and seven hours away
And still I yearn for simpler day
The sun never sets here
And its burning my lies alive.

And under the cover of darkness
For anything but well-bent truth.

Bury me under the sun
I'm drowning
Blind me
