What's yours is unsure
What's mine will stay mine
Stay sure the two never shall meet

The only discussion is our bottom line
From the flood of our trash to the street
A draft to lure the sea a single direction
Myself staring right back at me

Perfecting perception in my own reflection
Scripting his hollow dignity

You sold away your name

And who will break your fall
After you've used them all
After you hit the wall

Some things it will change
It wont go away
The biggest of lies to myself

Hanging your hooks
Waiting for us to mumble
They drew in, we ring the bell

Waiting for something to make it make sense
Will kill off the money trail
Under the wheels, hop over the fence
The highest bid gets itself a sale

You've sold away your life

And who will break your fall
After you've used them all
After you hit the wall
Without an ounce of shame
You've sold away your name
After you hit the wall

Everything you planned to stand for has come to nothing

("no clue what the rest of this line is")

And who will break your fall
After you've used them all
After you hit the wall
Without an ounce of shame
You've sold away your name
After you hit the wall
