Waking up to find myself beside myself the view it wasn't right
Stepping softly in-between the things I should have said and should have done
Some people can't be pleased I guess it's you I guess it's me I guess we'll see I walk into the hallway that will harbor all these things until I'm gone

I said, I want you to know
I made it through it all
I'm better but I want to see your face one more time before I leave and then I'm gone

Washed up on the shore where the drugs don't work and they hurt you even more Stuck inside a room of broken hearts that won't heal that you left behind
Some people can't be pleased I guess it's you I guess it's me I guess we'll see So what now of my faith or is it just an exercise to limit pain?
I said, I want you to know
I made it through it all
I made it but I can't believe all the things you said

Crawling back from the bed you made You talk to me as if I wasn't there

Waking up to find myself beside myself the view it wasn't pretty
Stepping softly in-between the things I should have said and not have done
You know I can't be pleased I guess it's you I guess it's me I guess we'll see

I fight to keep it all but stop so would you please just walk away and leave

I said, I want you to know
I made it through it all
I'm better but I want to see your face one more time before I leave and then iÂ'm gone
