Black umbrella's popping up, clouds are moving in.
Yellow taxi's filling up, Falls first bitter wind.
And as the whole world rushes by, I feel you getting near.
For me, it's like a time machine that takes me to this moment every year.
Here it comes it's pouring down and all the people run and scatter.
Bundled up against the cold, as for me it doesn't matter.
How we stood in the storm, how I felt safe and warm.
How I love the rain, it brings you back to me.

Here it comes pouring down, like magic dust upon my shoulder.
There's your smile, I'm in your arms we walk along as it gets colder.
And we laughed at the storm, soak and wet, safe and warm.
How I love the rain, it brings you back to me.
Thoughts of you, that's the gift, as I drift through the haze.
How we loved making love, on those rainy days.
Here they come, their pouring down. These tears I cry feel just like old friends.
They come 'round and stay a while and then their gone before the night ends.
Oh, we loved in the storm, hearts on fire, safe and warm.
How I love the rain.
Oh, how I love the rain.
How I love the rain, it brings you back to me.
