I know I'm not supposed to hate you
Pity the next who comes along
They say we enter stages- one is rage, and choosing who went wrong

Well it was cause it wasn't me
Or maybe there was some of me in this too
But it was you and me once,
You and me pal, you and me once- anyhow

I hang on too long
What do I see in someday
I hang on too long
How can I be one way- Loyal

You, you're the coward, you're the hedonist-
You got off the ride, you missed the train and you didn't tell me
Was I not weak enough- you couldn't take just what I'm made of
You were something like my mother
You were something like my father too
Is all of love just what's familiar?
Is that what this is tumbling down to?

I hang on too long
What do I see in someday
I hang on too long
How can I be one way- Loyal

I must confess I thought you'd hesitate
Now loneliness grieves deeper than the wait

Hello, Denial, has it been a year
I fear you numbed me out so well, I didn't see the headlights
And Sadness, he's moved in across the hall
He's knockin' on the wall
Loyal

... I accept that you're not coming back
