Check out the skylark, riding and singing alongside Salt cool breeze coming from the West
Ships and their lawlessness, running wild and the waves
Wearing their bright blue summer best

Here come the sailors
Marching two by two by two
They pressed their pants
And shined their shoes

Aren't they strapping and deranged?
Too long at sea makes your eyes strange
Makes them strain for the vision of your youth
Dripping castles in the sand

I could still go there
But my mind would be too loud
Sun on water
Bright colors drowning me out
I could still go there

Now they're standing on the beach
In a wild colored wind
Sun rays stream
Ah, the pretty boys gleam

Watching distant buoys toss
Water rolling on the rocks
Smoothing down the broken things

I could still go there
But my mind would be too loud
Sun on water
Bright colors drowning me out

I could still go there
But my mind would be too loud
Sun on water
Bright colors drowning me out

I could still go there

But my mind would be too loud
Sun on water
Bright colors drowning me out

I could still go there
Sun on water
