If I didn't know your game

Would you lay me down and lie about your name

If things didn't go your way

Would you tell the lawyers you were just playing

If there were no hell to pay

I wonder would you still need a god

If the rich were weak

Would you fight for their lives

Without a marriage would you give up your wife

If you saw me coming would you take another route

In your house does difference stay out

If there were no hell to pay

I wonder would you still need a god

If there were no hell to pay

I wonder would you still need a god

Do you dig for gold

Would you sell your soul

What should we know

Who are you when you're alone

If my eyes were closed

Would you launch your stones

What should we know

Who are you when you are all alone

With the cameras off

Would you beat him till he's dead

If you found the cure

Would you make us beg

If no one had to work

Would you still get out of bed

If the bullet was for me

Would you take it in the head

If there were no hell to pay

I wonder would you still need a god
If there were no hell to pay
I wonder would you still need a god

Chorus

If I believed in you and you believed in me
Would you still need a god
If no one cared would you sleep all day
Would you still need a god
If my eyes were closed would you launch your stones
Would you still need a god
With the cameras off would you beat him dead
Would you still need a god
