once upon a time in a warehouse near a Mississippi ravine there was a Theodore Roosevelt statue made of solid aquamarine
I have hollowed out quite a comfy living space inside of his head they still don't know I'm making the noise they think it's Teddy's spirit instead here we go, top layer of cheese oh no, big hornets and bees speaking Japanese

I'm on fire, I'm on a grenade going faster than the Christmas Day parade without a doubt, and by far the greatest way to travel ain't by car A E, I owe you sometimes, why? why not? you know me I like to disagree once upon a time in Morocco, aliens came out of the sky they said they wanted chocolate coins, they would not tell the president why people gathered what they could and they put it all inside the alien craft but it was not enough for the aliens so they killed everybody and laughed spring water, natural flavors pyridoxine hydrochloride citric acid, malic acid, sodium benzoate, potassium sorbate

and cyanocobalamin, yeah

I'm on fire, I'm on big train going faster than Stephen Hawking's brain there is no way I can win I won't give up and that's my only sin
A E, I owe you sometimes, why?

why not? you know why, you know why so row your boat down the stream you know life is but a dream you may sense a running theme but it's never what it seems to seem to be or it's not it's exactly what you thought but by then you had forgotten the reason you were on that stupid yacht

(chocolate coins, chocolate coins...)
